

The New Food Court

The new Dinklaker Middle School Food Court was an instant success. Students flocked to it for a hearty breakfast, mid-morning snack, and lunch, and court attendants Cheyenne and Chevonne were happy to serve the youngsters. Oh sure, a few worrywart teachers complained that their pupils' attention spans had diminished rather a lot and that fifth graders in particular were exhibiting signs of slurred speech and impaired balance. But Principal Pringler chose to look on the bright side: The school district was finally able to realize a profit from all that Everclear that a former superintendent had procured under slightly shady circumstances, which – no surprise, really – is another story.