

Freefall

One of the wackier dance crazes to hit the U.S. (ha) in recent years is the Freefall, inadvertently invented by Esther and Ruby Pringler one evening last January as they attempted to break into their sister-in-law's Miami Beach apartment. Although exceedingly improvisational, the Freefall accurately demonstrates the unencumbered falling motion of a body that is subject only to the earth's gravitational field, one of the four Fundamental Interactions of Nature and the one most likely to give the performer contusions and abrasions.
